When Are YOU Going to Stop Relying on Injury Data as a Measure of Safety?

By Alan D Quilley CRSP

It is highly illogical to use a measure that can clearly be the result of LUCK to measure the existence of a state of safety. Safety is what we DO; it's not what doesn't happen to us. If YOU don't stop using this measure and giving it importance in your organization...WHO WILL?

Of course, people who work safely have a much lower negative outcome than those who don't. The trouble is there are also very unsafe humans who DON'T pay the price for their unsafe behaviour. The evidence is overwhelming that we can do unsafe things and get away with them. That fact alone will demonstrate that as a confident measure of the existence of "safe," we should STOP relying on this illogical conclusion. Low incident rates CAN mean that a company has worked safely for a period of time. They can also mean that they were lucky!

If we are to measure safety, we need to measure safety! Seems obvious, doesn't it? Then why are so many companies using this silly and illogical data and claiming a correlation to their safety efforts. "We must be safe because we have low incident rates." is like saying "I must be a safe driver because I haven't had an accident!" Even worse, "I've never had an accident while texting and driving so it must be a safe thing to do!"

So, there's only one real question left... "When are YOU going to stop using this very poor measure of "safety" in your company?"

Kudos for our CRSP and CRST Virtual Coaching & Study Material

"I passed! I'm so happy. Thank you very much I've already recommended the course to coworkers".

"Just wanted to share that I got my CRSP results today and I passed. I was a little surprised by the number of folks who did not pass and the low passing mark. I want to thank you for all your help and time spent with me to succeed with this".

"I just received my results and I was one of the 55% that passed. They stated that 159 of the 289 passed and 64% of first time writers passed and 33% of supplementary writers passed. So thanks to your CRSP course that enabled me to be successful. I made the plan and stuck to the plan that I had made taking part in your course".
